DALY CITY LIONS SCORE A BIG HIT AT INITIAL PARTY

If there has been any doubt in the minds of the residents of Daly City as to the progressive spirit of the Daly City Lions Club, that doubt has been dispelled by the success of the dance given by the Lions at the Daly City Auditorium last Saturday night.

The Auditorium was comfortably filled with young and older members of the community, all of whom enjoyed the sociable atmosphere, and at the close of the dancing declared it to have been one of the best parties of the season.

The capable committee in charge of the affair had decorated the hall in a pleasing manner, and provided each one in attendance with carnival headdress, the Lion members being distinguished from the rest by their hats on which was emblazoned the Lion emblem.

The arrangement committee had the floor in excellent condition, and this, coupled with good music, made the dancers show to best advantage.

The efficient floor committtee, the members of which saw to it that all became acquainted and had a good time, was composed of Lions Otto Schamm, Dr. W. J. Lantheaume, Dr. F. E. Callsen, W. J. Sweeney, Steve Pfeifer and Claude Rich. Mrs. Clarice Olson, of the Community Realty Co., generously offered her services as hostess for the evening and ably assisted the Lions in making the event the success it was.

As cashier-doorman, or what have you, Attoreny William H. Clay made a name for himself throughout the early evening, seeing to it that everyone was armed with the proper credentials, but later in the evening, however, he tired and turned the position over to Andy Vireno, who did a neat finish.

And how J. Sommerkamp, the popular secretary of the Lions, did strut his stuff tending the punch bowl, which had a liberal patronage.

The proceeds of this first party given by the Lions Club, a civic service organization, will be used to a good advantage in the work undertaken for the installation of playgrounds and other civic improvements.

FIGHTERS ASSESSED STIFF FINE BY JUDGE

Ed. Landuyt, a longshoreman, and Joe De Hulster, a carpenter, must spend the next six months in the county jail, or pay fines of $500 each, as the result of a fistic encounter they staged one day last week. This was the sentence meted out to them by Justice of the Peace Ellis C. Johnson, before whom the combatants were brought following their set-to. They are probably wondering why it should be that Tunney will receive a cool million dollars for his encounter with Jack Dempsey, while they must pay dearly for their little encounter.

It is said the two men attempted a Dempsey-Tunney stunt without pay after a party, and that neighbors did not appreciate their efforts and called Officer W. Hopman, who placed the battlers under arrest, and when they were brought before Judge Johnson he gave them their choice of paying a fine of $500 each or becoming guests at the county jail for a period of six months. As they could not produce the cash, they will probably be given free meals for the next half year.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR PLANS RALLY FOR NEXT SUNDAY

A splendid program is being arranged for next Sunday morning at the Sunday school hour, from 10 to 11, at Grace Presbyterian church.

Special music and a short play will be given by members of the Christian Endeavor Society at this hour. We are planning for a real rally, not only of numbers but of real awakening in the interest of Bible teaching, and trust that we may see the house filled to overflowing. Mrs. McNair will sing, and the boys will be there with their violins, and we are sure of a good time.

One hundred and seven came to the Bible school last Sunday and a splendid spirit was manifest in all.

Come, let us work while it is day.

The real drawing power of the church has always been Service, kind and loving, and when that is lost the magnet is broken. Come with the idea of serving and you will be happy.

The Eastern Star Chapter of Daly City was the guest of the Ladies' Aid Society on Thursday for luncheon at 12:30.

CHAS. H. GATCHELL, Minister.

Draws Thirty-day Sentence

Oscar Johnson, of San Francisco, was arrested on Wednesday by Chief J. Doyle on charges of disturbing the peace and sentenced by Judge Ellis C. Johnson to thirty days in the county jail at Redwood City.

PARENTS' NIGHT AT HIGH SCHOOL

A number of the parents of pupils at Jefferson Union high school are attending school tonight, while their children remain at home.

But the class recitations will be different, for the teachers are not going to ask any of the parents to recite. The teachers are going to do all of the reciting themselves. They are going to explain the work done in each class, and if the fathers and mothers present at this unique school session want to ask any questions, the teachers will gladly answer them.

Principal Ferguson has announced that the purpose of the parents' night at Jefferson Union high school is to have the fathers and mothers of the district get acquainted with their high school, with the teachers, and with one another, and thus become better acquainted with the work that is being done by their own boys and girls. He believes that this will add to the efficiency of the school and that it will help every student to do better work.

And no doubt the parents of the pupils of Jefferson Union high school will enjoy this evening of attending school. It is hoped that every parent of the district will be present, and that no one will be tardy.

PASTOR RETURNED TO THE M. E. CHURCH

Conference is over for another year, and the pastor of the Daly City Methodist Episcopal church has been returned. This year is going to be a banner year for the church. At present every department is going forward, and everyone seems to be willing to do his or her share. By constant co-operation this church can be one of the outstanding churches of San Mateo county.

We were happy to have Mr. Ferguson with us last Sunday. Everyone enjoyed his splendid message, and we sincerely hope that he will come often. The Epworth League is to be congratulated upon their ability to conduct the church service during the pastors' absence.

Please don't forget the Sunday morning service. We need your help in making this one of the finest services of the day. Get the habit; come to church Sunday morning.

Sunday evening we are to be favored with a solo by Mr. W. McGregor. Everyone will be delighted to know of this special feature. Plan to come early Sunday evening. Don't forget the hour, 8 o'clock. The pastor's subject is one that will be of special interest to all, "Is the Bible Infalible?"

What we need more than anything else in this community, as well as the world over, is a rededication of the hearts and lives of Christian men and women to the great program of our Master.

Dr. Gordon in one of his books tells of an imaginary conversation which Jesus is supposed to have had with Gabriel when He went back to heaven.

Gabriel is saying, "Master, You died for the whole world down there, did You not?" "Yes," comes the reply. "You must have suffered much." Again the answer, "Yes." "And do they all know about it?" asks Gabriel. "Oh, no," Jesus responds. "Only a few in Palestine know about it so far." "Well, Master," he asks, "What have You done about telling the whole world that you died for them?"

The Master is supposed to answer, "I asked Peter, James, John and little Andrew and some more of them down there just to make it the business of their lives to tell yet others and still others, until the last man in the farthest circle has heard the story and has felt the thrilling power if it."

Then Gabriel answers: "Yes, but suppose Peter fails; suppose after a while John does not tell others; suppose that their descendants in the twentieth century get so busy about things that they do not tell others. What then?"

And back came that quiet voice: "Gabriel, I haven't made any other plans; I am counting on them."

He has committed to our charge the task of spreading the gospel. If we fail, His cause fails. To each of us He gives the call as He gave it to Matthew of old, "Follow Me."

ELLIOTT L. FISHER, Pastor.

THREE HUNTSMEN PROVIDE VENISON FOR LODGE DINNER

Three huntsmen, residents of Daly City, a few weeks ago journeyed to the northern part of the state in search of recreation and with the expressed determination of each bringing down a deer.

It seems that the search for the elusive deer was long and fruitless, until the last day of their vacation period had arrived. On that day, after they had given up all hope and had finally decided they must return to their homes without a trophy of their hunt, a beautiful buck was suddenly sighted and the three hunters promptly went into action.

The buck was finally brought to the ground, each of the hunters believing he was the successful marksman. But is seems that not one of the three could convince his fellow sportsmen that he should be given the sole credit for the slaying of the buck. However, they were unanimous in their desires as to the disposal of the fruits of the chase, and the decision was reached that their fellow lodge members should enjoy a feed as the result of their hunt.

So last Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock over a hundred Masons, members of Crocker Lodge No. 454, and some from nearby lodges, met at the Masonic Hall in Daly City, as the guests of the hunters, George E. Archer, A. McKeown and H. Hanson, and enjoyed one of the most delightful banquets in the history of Crocker lodge.

Messrs. Archer, McKeown and Hanson were assisted in giving this dinner by Captain F. W. Winters. The meal was prepared by Peter Pavlos and served by a number of the members of Crocker lodge, who had volunteered their services.

James Syme, Master of Crocker lodge, acted as toastmaster. Interesting talks were made by the hosts of the evening and several other members. There were a number of splendid solos, quartets, musical numbers, community singing and recitations, and an evening long to be remembered was enjoyed by all who were fortunate enough to be present.

Messrs. Archer, McKeown and Hanson have promised to engage in another hunt next year, and if successful in the pursuit of the wily buck, will stage another banquet. And the guests at the Tuesday evening banquet declared they didn't care who killed the buck, but they were greatly interested in the promised feed a year hence.

EASTERN STAR MEMBERS ENTERTAINED AT BANQUET

Last Saturday evening the members of Crocker Chapter No. 382, Order of the Eastern Star, were entertained at the annual dinner of the order, held in the Masonic Hall. This annual affair is eagerly looked forward to by the members and is one of the best attended meetings of the year.

In addition to the splendid spread there were entertainment features of interest, and at the conclusion of the banquet the floor was cleared and dancing enjoyed until a late hour.

The committee in charge of this most successful affair was composed of the officers of Crocker Chapter, headed by Florence Stockton, Associate Matron.

The officers of Crocker Chapter are: Isabella Robertson, Worthy Matron; Kenneth MacLean, Worthy Patron; Florence Stockton, Associate Matron; Vera MacDonald, Secretary; Jeannette Fischer, Treasurer; Alma Parkison, Conductress; Louise Bertha Aitchison, Associate Conductress; Robert Hall Turner, Chaplain; Gertrude Parker, Marshal; Emily MacLean, Adah; Ellen Victoria Grover, Ruth; Linda May England, Esther; Elizabeth MacLean, Martha; Yolanda Strand, Electa; Mary Murray, Warder; Mary Young Jaques, Sentinel; Minerva Beasley, Flag Bearer.

NEW SOCIAL SERVICE SECRETARY IS CHOSEN

The office of executive secretary of the San Mateo County Social Service Commission, held for many years by Miss Florence Boggs, was declared vacant Monday afternoon by the board of supervisors in session at Redwood City and Mrs. Ellen Biber of Burlingame, widow of the late Dr. Paul Biber, was appointed to the position.

Miss Boggs was granted a seven months' leave of absence and this expired September 14. However, she is still away and when the supervisors were informed Monday that she had not returned, they declared the office vacant and made the new appointment.

Mrs. Biber has been active for many years in social service work and recently temporary secretary pending the return of Miss Boggs.

BATTLE TO TEST THE RACING LAW TO BE CONTINUED

Advocates of horse racing in California lost the first round of a court battle to test the validity of the state law against wagering on horse races when Superior Judge George H. Buck last Saturday denied a writ of habeas corpus to James McDonald, of San Francisco, arrested by Sheriff James J. McGrath a month ago at Tanforan race track, after McDonald had placed a bet on a race under the "certificate system." Judge Buck's decision read: "Writ of habeas corpus denied. Let the petitioner apply to the higher court."

The decision, awaited by race track owners and others in all parts of the state in hopes of a favorable decision, was handed down following submission of the case on briefs some two weeks previous. The decision means that in the opinion of the court the "certificate system," in which the bettor purchases "an interest in the race," according to the proponents of the new method of betting, constitutes a violation of the law.

McDonald, who was given his liberty on bail of $250 immediately after he was arrested by Sheriff McGrath at the time of the race, will appeal the case in order to have a thorough test of the law as applied to the "certificate system," it is understood. He will be represented by Attorney Walter Linforth, of San Francisco.

Decision in the test case is said to affect racing programs in all parts of California, and at Tijuana, Mexico, where extensive additions to the million dollar racing plant of James J. Coffroth and associates have been halted pending a test of the new betting system. Should it be declared legal, tracks at Los Angeles and other cities of the south would bid heavily for the receipts which have been going to the Mexican town during the past years of winter racing there.

Investors of San Mateo county who have become interested in development of property adjoining Tanforan track at San Bruno are also making a study of the test case, it is said.

Should McDonald win in the higher courts, Tanforan would be assured of racing meets in the future.

It is said the appeal will be filed shortly in the appellate court. Attorney Linford will seek an injunction at the same time to prevent the sheriff of San Mateo county and other officials from interfering with the race meet pending the return of a decision by that body, it is said. In this event the meet this year will be run on the purse contribution plan.

DRILL TEAM PREPARING FOR NOVEMBER CONTEST

A meeting of the drill team of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, Native Daughters of the Golden West, was held in the Daly City Auditorium last Friday evening. Meetings will be discontinued until the first Friday in October, when the girls will enter strenuous training to prepare for the big state-wide competitive drill to be held in the Civic Auditorium in San Francisco in November.

The girls made an excellent showing in the Admission Day parade at Santa Cruz and received many compliments and much applause, but as there were no cups awarded for the drill, they had no chance of winning one.

The drum corps of El Carmelo Parlor of Native Sons of the Golden West is to be congratulated on the wonderful showing they made and on winning the second prize in the parade for drum corps. There were many who believe they were entitled to have been given first honors. They will also compete in the drill in November.

Both teams are to be drilled by Mr. Fred Collins, who deserves much credit for his untiring efforts in making the drill team and drum corps what they are.

WOULD TAKE 385 DAYS TO TRAVEL OUR ROADS

How long will it take to motor over all the roads in California? This casual inquiry, coming usually from out-of-state tourists, brings vague answers. Frequently the visiting motorist announces that he will be in the state for two or three weeks and wishes to see all he can in that time.

Figures of existing roads in this state, compiled by the California State Automobile Association, show that a motorist traveling 200 miles a day would require 385 days to traverse every road once. The total mileage is 77,000.

Should the motorost decide to make the trip merely over the state highway system, the tour could be accomplished in approximatley thirty-three days, as the total state system is 6,591 miles.

DEMURRER FILED ON REDISTRICTING

A demurrer to the writ of mandate issued September 2, ordering the supervisors of San Mateo county to proceed with a redistricting of the county, or show cause why they do not do so, was filed on Tuesday by District Attorney Franklin Swart in the Superior Court at Redwood City.

Superior Judge J. R. Welch of Santa Clara county, presiding over the hearing, granted counsel ten days to file statements in the case, when the district attorney had not been given sufficient time to prepare for the defense.

In filing the demurrer to the writ, obtained by Frederick Peterson, Burlingame business man, in a suit to force redistricting of the county, District Attorney Swart declared that the case must be tried solely on legal grounds.

"I am presenting this matter on its merits," replied John F. Davis, former city attorney of Burlingame, representing Peterson. "This reapportionment must come about eventually."

The demurrer filed Tuesday attacks the right of the court to order the redistricting, and will be argued before Judge Welch immediately upon preparations of the case by counsel.

The hearing on Tuesday was attended by City Attorney Fletcher A. Cutler of Burlingame in addition to a number of San Mateo and Burlingame business men, who instituted the test case in an attempt, they declared, to equalize representation of various parts of the county on the board of supervisors.

Since the issuance of the writ, the Coastside Civic Union has pledged itself to fight the proposed redistricting and has employed a law firm to represent them.

The real fight for and against the revision of supervisorial representation will probably center between the Coastside Civic Union and Peterson, who filed the original suit, it is believed.

According to Peterson's suit, the redistricting of San Mateo county was done in 1901, when the total population was 12,000, as compared with the present population of 70,000, with 20,000 registered voters. The coastside people declare that representation should be according to territory and not by population.

SERMON DELIVERED BY FATHER DONOHOE

The following sermon was delivered Sunday, September 18, at St. Maximus church, by Father James Donohoe:

The oldest memory of man is one of suffering; the oldest writing is an elegy; the oldest piece of music is a funeral song; and the oldest gathering of people is a funeral. Down through every year comes the long, sad, silent procession of death.

There are graves in every valley; there are bones on every hillside. From every house that human hands have built, from every home that human hearts have gathered together, at some time or other the dead are brought forth for burial. The earth is almost damp with human tears. Men are tired of digging graves for other men.

Now as Jesus entered Naim, the beautiful, they were carrying to the grave the body of a young man. He was the only son of his mother—and she was a widow. The two processions meet—one following the Lord of life in joy, and the other following the procession of death in sorrow. Christ notices the contrast; His heart is moved with pity for He has compassion on this mother.

He approached the boy, gazed upon his uncovered face set in the stern paleness of death; the pall-bearers halted. All are silent as Christ turned to the living who accompanied the body and said, "Weep not." He came nearer, touched the body and that a mother might cease her weeping said, "Young man, I say to thee, arise!" He delivered him from the land of death and gave back this son to a mother who found it difficult living without him.

We all have many reasons for believing in the divinity of Christ. Some believe He was God because He said, "Come to Me, all you who labor and are heavily burdened, and I will refresh you." Others believe in Him because of His kindness, of generosity to sinners; because He gave to the world the consoling parable of the Prodigal Son. Others because He said, and proved His saying, "I am the Resurrection and the Life, He that believeth in Me, although he be dead, shall live."

But all Christians believe in this convincing proof of His divinity—He stood in the presence of death and overcame it. "Young man, I say to thee, arise!" And he that was dead sat up and began to speak.

To die brings with it a certain reverential and religious fear, for to die means to be called to our judg-

POSTPONE ACTION ON ROAD DISTRICT FOR SIXTY DAYS

The San Mateo county board of supervisors postponed action on the formation of the proposed road district for the building of the Alameda de Las Pulgas at their meeting last Monday, after hearing lengthy arguments for and against the proposition. Attorney J. B. Gordon presented the argument for the formation of the district, while District Attorney Franklin Swart presented the protests.

Protesting against the district were David Cosgrave and John R. Selby, representing the Menlo Country Club; W. W. Carson, H. J. Baxter and Attorney H. H. Childress, representing Carmelita B. Kendall; E. W. Hewson, Belle J. Brittain; and Rev. Father John J. Ryan, representing the Roman Catholic archbishop.

Favoring the district were E. C. Pringle, George H. Lent, Attorney Brooke Mohun, representing the National Mortgage Co., Swift & Co., Bank of South San Francisco; Fred H. Drake, president of the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, and Daniel R. Stafford, president of the Redwood City Chamber of Commerce.

Explanation in detail of the proposed district for the purpose of building the Alameda de Las Pulgas was made by R. A. Klassen, engineer in charge of the work.

Following the protests and favorable arguments, on motion of Supervisor Rosalie Brown, seconded by Supervisor Thomas L. Hickey, the matter was laid over for sixty days.

For the advertising fund of the Pacific Highway Association, the supervisors voted $1,000 as the quota of San Mateo county.

Additional lights were ordered for the Menlo Park lighting district by the board in answer to a request filed with them.

On petition of George A. Green and others of the Menlo district, the name of Menlo avenue was changed to Oaks drive.

On recommendation of Engineer R. A. Klassen, the matter of installing sewers in the drainage district of South San Francisco was held in abeyance and all bids rejected.

ALBERIAN INSTITUTE BACKING DRILL TEAM

Next Tuesday evening, September 27, is the time, and the Hotel Whitcomb is the place when and where one of the largest dances of the year is to be held.

This greatly advertised affair is to be given under the auspices of the Alberian branch of the Young Ladies' Institute, and is for the benefit of the recently organized drill team, of which Miss Mary Coghlan is the manager and Miss Adele Byrne the captain.

An active committee, headed by the Misses Madeline Cotter and Peggy Dunphy, has been busily engaged for some time past in perfecting the arrangements, and have met with so much success that predictions are being freely made that it will be one of the most successful social functions in the history of Alberian Institute.

Roland O'Farrels' orchestra of well known jazz symphonists is to furnish the music.

Membership in the Alberian Institute is derived, to a large extent, from young women of the Mission district, especially those resident of the Excelsior district. Miss Maude Everson is the president of the organization.

LINEMAN FATALLY INJURED IN FALL

James Lewis Helm, Redwood City, a lineman employed by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, suffered fatal injuries in a fall from a shade tree in Burlingame last Friday, and Herman J. Elliott, San Francisco, also a lineman of the company, was seriously injured in a fall from a pole. Both were engaged in trimming limbs from trees to permit passage of electric wires. Helm suffered a skull fracture after a plunge of 30 feet and died at Mills Memorial hospital two hours after the accident. Elliott while climbing a pole among branches of a nearby tree, stepped on a limb which failed to support his weight.

THOUSAND ATTEND PICNIC

With approximately 1,000 persons present to participate in the sports, games and other entertainment, the members of the Bankitaly Club staged one of their most successful picnics at the Belle Monti Country Club in San Mateo county last Sunday. A feature of the day were the activities of a "pirate" group, who staged various attacks and thoroughly advertised the club's forthcoming play, "Captain Applejack." Officials of the club devoted much time to golf, while trapshooting, tennis and numerous other sports found favor with the throng.

AUTO LAWS WILL BE CONSIDERED

Organization of the joint legislative committee which will make a study of the problem of compulsory insurance for all California automobile owners and the traffic situation in this state was effected Saturday at the initial meeting of that body. Speaker Edgar C. Levey of the Assembly was named chairman of the committee, Senator C. C. Baker of Salinas, vice-chairman, and Assemblyman Harry F. Sewell of Whittier, secretary.

Plans were made for the future sessions of the committee and for the work to be accomplished. Under the term of the act creating the committee, investigation will be made of traffic conditions and of needed changes in the motor vehicle laws of the state. Public hearings will be held in various cities of the state, the first being set for November 14 at the State building, it is announced. An office for the committee will be opened in the State building, but appointment of an executive secretary will be delayed for a time. The sum of $7,500 has been set aside for the expenses of the committee.

Committee members present included also Senators Tallant Tubbs of San Francisco and Harry Chamberlin of Los Angeles and Assemblyman M. J. McDonough of Oakland.

INSURES COMPLETION OF LINCOLN HIGHWAY

California, Utah and Nevada are united to close the gap in the transcontinental Lincoln Highway and make it an improved highway from coast to coast, as the result of the settlement last week of a nine year controversy over rival routes in Western Utah, according to announcement made today by the California State Automobile Association.

After studying the situation for six months, the "Lincoln Highway Committee of Fifteen, headed by C. C. Cottrell, manager of the highways bureau of the State Automobile Association, recommended the re-routing of the Lincoln higway via the Wendover cut-off and the construction of the a new road between Ely and Wendover.

The Lincoln Highway Association has been asked to officially ratify this plan and Cottrell was delegated to go to Detroit to lay the merits of the adopted route before officials of the highway association.

Cottrell said that the road building authorities in Utah and Nevada have promised to financially support the construction of the Ely-Wendover link.

In announcing its decision which is expected to result in closing the last gap in a second transcontinental highway into Northern and Central California, the committee stated:

"We are of the opinion that the difficulties of every nature are fewer on the Wendover route than on any other, and consequently endorse that route as the one to which all agencies should immediately lend their support.

"In arriving at the foregoing conclusion, we feel that we have met the wishes of the people of the western states in providing a solution of this problem that will be more immediate than any other."

BONDS AND TAXATION

Everybody wants reduced taxes, yet a majority can nearly always be induced to vote for any sort of a bond issue. How can these two ideas be reconciled? They can't be.

If we continue to vote bonds, we must expect continued increases in taxation. That ought to be plain to anyone, says a contributor.

The question each voter should decide, then, is whether he believes the proposed improvement for which bonds are asked justifies the payment of the increased tax. As a guide in making his decision he should ask these questions:

Is the improvement really necessary? Do the local conditions warrant the expenditure? Will the making of this improvement prevent or delay more important improvements? Will the funds raised be used judiciously and economically? Is the amount asked excessive?

These and other questions along the same line should determine the action of the individual voter, who should not be swayed by the appeals of the professional booster, who boosts at the expense of someone else.

Many bond issues are necessary and it would be short-sightedness not to vote them, but often they are merely the means of carrying out some politician's scheme, which is entirely beyond the range of reason and common sense.

New life new color for your living room

A modern principle in floor and table lamp construction improves home lighting

Soft, mellow, shadowless light evenly spread throughout the room—ample light for the whole family to read, write, sew or play cards—light that brings out the rich colors of draperies and furniture—light that is kind to your family's eyes.

Such lighting is now possible through a new principle in floor and table lamp construction. This new principle banishes the harmful gloom and glare that is so common with ordinary lamps.

The New Principle

The silk shade rests on an inverted glass reflector which surrounds the bulb so that direct rays from the electric lamp can never strike you in the eyes. It's this reflector that saves your eyes and diffuses the light. The result is a single floor or table lamp that really lights a room.

Our representative would gladly discuss home lighting with you. He'll tell you about the beautiful new floor and table lamps that are designed after this new principle of lighting.

WORK IS STARTED ON NEW BAY BRIDGE

Work started Wednesday on the San Mateo-Hayward bridge across San Francisco bay, says the Burlingame Advance. Establishing an office in the old National Bank building, San Mateo, A. W. Deuel, chief field engineer for the Raymond Concrete Construction Company of New York, put a crew of surveyors and their helpers on the job drawing lines for the western approach running two and one-half miles from the bridge head to Ninth avenue, San Mateo.

According to Deuel, much work other than the actual construction of the bridge structure is to be done, such as building the two approaches and making east and west fills and trestle work out to the center span and draw.

Leaving Lake Pontiac, Louisiana, last week, one of the largest pile-drivers in the world is now enroute to the local bridge site by way of the Panama canal, according to Judge John J. McGrath of San Mateo, an ardent booster for the new bridge. This pile-driver cost approximately $150,000 to build and is capable of driving four giant concrete piles at one operation. It will be the largest pile-driver ever brought to the Pacific coast, and when put in operation will be a big factor in putting the seven-mile span across the bay in record time.

Both Deuel and McGrath stated that there was nothing at present standing in the way of the bridge builders and that increased action would be the program order from now on until the completion of the span.

GAME WARDEN BURKE WILL RETAIN POSITION

Setting at rest reports of a general shake-up in the personnel of the State Fish and Game Commission, Fred G. Stevenot, chief of the State Department of Natural Resources, has announced that all members of the partol will be continued in office without regard to politics. The order affects some ninety men.

Jack Burke, of Daly City, San Mateo county game warden, is one of the men to be reappointed under Stevenot's policy.

"These men all serve under civil service regulations," said Stevenot, "and so long as their work is satisfactory they have nothing to fear from reorganization of the department."

Mrs. Austin C. Ostermann of Atlanta has done her bit toward making the pathway of divorce lawyers easy, as her marital record shows: Married Ostermann; divorced him. Married H. A. Carter; divorced him. Married Ostermann a second time and divorced him; then a third time and divorced him. Now she has married him for the fourth time.

Lindbergh's autographs have already become highly valuable in France. A few nights ago a Paris charitable society in an effort to raise funds put up at auction a letter and a photograph, each bearing Lindbergh's signature. The letter brought 30,000 francs and the photograph 35,000.

Tribulations of a traveling salesman are revealed in a recent letter from one of them, who says: "The average traveling man is obliged to take a great deal of abuse from his sales manager, and then some more from his wife." Still he isn't with either of them constantly, so it might be worse.

John F. Weakley, bank cashier at Donelson, Tenn., recently demonstrated that there is nothing "weakly" about him except his name. When two bandits attempted to rob the bank, he shot it out with them, capturing one and chasing the other away without booty.

SIDELIGHTS

Recently the 200th anniversary of the death of the noted Dutch physican, Boerhaave, recalled his famous advice, left behind him in a sealed called "The Deeper Secrets of Medicine." When opened, the book was found to contain only these fourteen words: "Keep your head cool and your feet warm; then you will defy all doctors."

From British Honduras come strange animals that crawl like alligators, have thick armour like turtles and can jump more than six feet. If a pedestrian were like that, he might cross the street with reasonable safety.

Wearing of massive steel armor was advocated by King James I of England, on the theory that it not only protected the knights from injury, but also prevented them from injuring anyone else. If disarmament fails, we might try armor.

We hear a good deal nowadays about the young ideas of some of our older men, but it appears that this is nothing new. An old newspaper published forty years ago records the stunt of a farmer near Owingsville, Ky., which isn't slow. A neighbor girl was in love with his two sons and couldn't make a choice, so the old fellow sent them both away and then, being a widower, married the girl himself.

People must have holidays. The Chinese, having few great victories or other notable achievements to celebrate, also observe certain days of "national humiliation," one of which is September 7, the anniversary of the signing of the Boxer protocol in 1901. Let us hope our country may never have such an occasion to commemorate.

William M. Small of St. Louis believes that the sun revolves around the earth and offers $100 for proof to the contrary. The difficulty in earning that hundred would not be in furnishing the proof, but in getting the same through William's understanding.

Under a new Turkish law all officials and other persons employed by the goverment must wear clothing made in Turkey. This is a very practical as well as drastic application of the trade at home idea.

Dr Charles Russ of England claims to be making progress toward proving his theory that certain rays or emanations are omitted from the human eye, which may account for the power the gaze of some persons has upon others.

George Wolf, New York architect, will not buy another "pig in a poke." Two negroes in cast-off garb of Pullman porters visited his office, gave him a drink of good whisky, said to have been smuggled by train from Canada, offered four cases for $285. Delivered for cash at a dark corner that night, Mr Wolf later found them to contain bricks, broken glass and other rubbish.

Edward H. Temme, London insurance clerk, is the first person 6 feet 2 inches tall to swim the English Channel, also the first to try this year, the eleventh swimmer to accomplish the feat since the beginning of the sport. Leading daily newspapers noted the exploit briefly, many not at all. Flyers, not swimmers, have the big headlines this year.

Edward L. Doheny, who owns more gasoline than almost anyone else in the country, recently spent a night in a Texas desert because he didn't have any of it with him. Next morning he gave $10 for a gallon and a half from a passing fliver and proceeded to Fort Stockton. Mr Doheny is chairman of the Pan American Petroleum Co.

Alex Cekriotis, a small boy of Lynn, Mass., confessed to playing football with a can in which his father had hidden $1,135, saying the can had been carried away by another boy after the game. After consternation had held sway in the household for some time, the mother found that Alex was mistaken when she discovered the can and money in a closet. The boys had played with a similar, though different can.

Miss Gladys Glad was pronounced by Florenz Ziegfeld as his most perfect 1927 chorus girl. She is 19, 5 feet 7 inches tall, weighs 120 pounds and a blonde with long hair. Naturally, Mr. Ziegfeld's decision made Gladys glad.

Miss Ruth Skibinski of St. Petersburg, Fla., asked a strange young man, Palmer Riggs, to take her downtown in the car he was driving. Accommodating, he complied and at her further request accompanied her into the police station. Then she had him arrested, as the car had been stolen from her a few days before.

Governor Bulow of South Dakota was recently criticized for making a speech attacking the administhation with President Coolidge present. Later addressing the crowd at a beauty contest, the governor determined to avoid any bad breaks, so he said: "I did some talking lately and got into trouble, therefore I am going to play safe. It's a fine evening, isn't it? I am sure no one can disagree with that statement. Good night."

President Coolidge panned some gold, and the opposition press meanwhile panned the President.

Diagram Showing Operation of the Tone-Gate Unit; a New Form of Audio Amplification Recently Made Available to the Public.

Newest Amplifier Benefits Any Set

Tone-Gate Unit, Recently on Market; New Form of Audio Amplification.

A form of audio amplification for which extraordinary claims are made by its sponsors has only recently been made available to the public through putting on sale the units from which it is assembled.

All sounds are made up of foundamental notes and overtones. Fundamental notes are produced by vibrations of a certain frequency. Each note has a number of overtones vibrating at different frequencies. Overtones are the characteristics of music that permit the ear to distinguish a note struck on a piano from the same note produced by another instrument.

Musical Frequencies Vary.

Music frequencies vary from 16 vibrations per second to over 4,000. For perfect reproduction, notes of all frequencies and all overtones should be amplified the same amount by the audio amplifier to resecure the original combination sent out by the broadcast station. Good audio amplification amplifies or multiplies notes of high and low frequency and all overtones the same degree, with full volume.

The new scheme of audio-frequency amplification is a combination resistance and impedance coupled with special enameled high resistance wire in multiple, wound with glassine paper between layers. All layers are impregnated with beeswax and rosin and held in an airtight oven for one hour. They have been designed for maximum amplification when used in connection with UX201A tubes. The resistance is sufficient to amplify the low notes and the inductance sufficient to enforce the overtones or high notes so necessary in clear articulation. A .5 mfd. condenser is used to block the DC plate voltage from the grid and is of sufficient capacity to by-pass nearly all the audio oscillations to the next grid. This choke is claimed to overcome all the disadvantages in the use of resistance coupled amplifiers and impedance amplifiers. The resistance of these chokes does not change, due to the low temperature coefficient of the wire used and is not affected by humidity or time. The choke does not require high mu tubes or plate voltages, but instead uses 201A tubes with 67 volts to 90 volts on the plate. The choke is self-biasing, due to the drop caused by the resistance in the choke.

Advantage Over Inductance Choke.

On the whole, this amplifier used with a last stage of transformer has shown under test an amplification twice that of three stages of pure inductance audio amplification.

The advantage of this amplifier over an inductance choke is that for the inductance choke to permit amplification of low notes a large number of turns are needed (at least three times more than at present used), which means a high distributed capacity with a loss of overtone.

Sun Directly Affects Strength of Signals

That the sun's influence is very probably the chief factor in determining the strength of long-wave radio signals was one of the important views stated in the annual report of the laboratory for special radio transmission research, as prepared by Dr. L. W. Austin of the United States bureau of statistics.

In addition to the curves and tables showing the routine measurements of the laboratory, curves were shown in the report which indicates a close relationship between the long-wave signal strength and the changes in the number of sunspots during the 11-year sunspot cycle, the signals increasing in strength with the increase in sunspots.

Other curves show periodic changes in signals during the time of the sun's rotation (27 days), while others indicate a nine-day period in the case of certain stations.

Some of the curves also suggest fixed active areas on the sun, which often produce an increase in signal strength when they face the earth. These periodic relationships, however, are not considered as well established as the relationship of the monthly and yearly averages of sunspots and signals extending over a number of years.

How Radio Service Man Doctors Up Weak Sets

Quite frequently the service man is called in to give his views on the failure of a home-built tuned radio-frequency set to afford volume and selectivity. Often this can be traced to the grid returns of one or more of the RF coils or the detector coil secondary being run to the wrong filament lead. There is a quick way to check up on the former, if the set is the usual type, using 90 volts of "B" battery potential on the plates of all amplifier tubes and 45 volts on the detector tube, with a 4½-volt negative bias on the audio-amplifier grids. It is to insert a 0-50 scale milliammeter in the wire running from the negative terminal of the "B" battery to the common "A" and "B" battery connection. If all is well, the deflection of the needle on the meter will indicate that a current of 17 mills or less is flowing. When a greater amount of current is being consumed, first see that the polarity of the "C" battery is correct, and that its positive terminal is connected to the negative "A" lead. Next, inspect the set and make sure that the RF amplifier grid returns are connected to the negative side of the lamenfit circuit and that those of the audio tubes are run to the negative "C" battery terminal. If a 201-A type tube is being used as detector, it should have a positive grid return, and if the detector is of the 200 or 200-A type, the grid return should be negative.

The milliammeter reading of about 17 mils, as mentioned above, will hold good for storage battery operated sets that do not use power tubes, as these tubes will require higher "B" and "C" voltages and draw a greater amount of plate current. Sets using various types of dry-cell tubes will draw slightly less.

Many owners of factory-made sets are replacing their type 201-A tubes with the type 200-A in the detector stage—and are neglecting to change the grid return. This is a point that must be watched, if the new tubes are to function properly. If ever you hear a set owner complaining that a special detector is not performing as it should, check up on the grid return before going to any further trouble.—Radio World.

Batteries First Place to Look for Trouble

The batteries are the first place to look for trouble in a five-tube set that does not bring in most of the stations. If they are all up to normal, next try the detector and radio-frequency tubes. If the radio-frequency tubes are not good, it will be difficult to hear distant stations. If the tubes and batteries are good and there are no noises to indicate trouble in the set itself, inspect the aerial and ground. A poor ground is very often the cause of not hearing many stations, while an improperly located or constructed aerial will also prevent the reception of such stations. The aerial should always be ten feet from the roof and twenty if practicable. There is considerable more energy picked up by an aerial ten feet above the roof than one four or five feet and a great deal more with a 20-foot one than with one ten feet high.

How Radio Is Affected During Thunderstorms

The weather bureau, although without facilities of its own for conducting investigations in this field, has cooperated in various ways with other agencies also interested in conditions affecting wireless telephony. As a result of work done by Nebraska Wesleyan university based on thunderstorm reports furnished by the weather bureau, the investigators reached the conclusion that there is no relation between barometric pressure and audibility, and that conditions at the sending station do not influence the audibility at a distant receiving station. High static frequency, high static audibility and a near-by thunderstorm area, however, tend to reduce the audibility at the receiving station.—Scientific American.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Exceeding even the most optimistic predictions of State officials, attendance at the Seventy-third annual California State Fair totaled 282,892, it was announced last week by Charles W. Paine, secretary of the State board of agriculture. This establishes a new record for the State Fair, the attendance total being over 50,000 beyond the highest figure at any previous exposition.

Eight hundred canning peach growers of Yuba, Sutter and Butte counties met last week and unanimously adopted a report of their own special committee which recommended the formation of a canning peach growers' pool. The growers further decided that the pool shall eventually be enlarged to include other counties in the Sacramento and San Joaquin Valleys.

Ten years of effort to find another route for the Southern Pacific's main line through San Jose once more hit a detour last week, when the residents of Willow Glen, a suburb on the southwestern fringe of San Jose, voted to form a separate city in order to deny the railroad a franchise. The vote was 685 to 363 in favor of incorporation as a city of the sixth class. All candidates for office of trustee were pledged to denial of the franchise.

Harold Lorentzen, formerly in charge of a big Arizona cattle ranch, last week took rank at Los Angeles as the first man to be awarded alimony under the new State law. His wife, Daisy M. Lorentzen, is under court order to pay him $50 a month and $150 to his attorney, pending the outcome of their contested divorce suit. Lorentzen said he had been out of work since last January and declared his wife "always had been the banker of the family."

A new contract under which the State eventually will acquire the Strub office building at Sacramento at a large saving as compared with past agreements went into force last week when the State Department of Finance made a payment of $200,000 to Charles Strub, San Francisco baseball magnate and owner of the building. Director of Finance Alexander R. Heran announced that the State under the new arrangement is to pay a yearly rental of $200,000 for three years, at the end of which time the Strub building will become State property without additional cost.

More than $5,000,000 was saved the people of California through the activities of the transportation section of the Railroad Commission during 1926-27, according to a report issued last week. This amount represents sums saved through regulation of rates and is in actual reductions, prevention of overcharges or proposed increases and refunds, it is declared. Five airplane carriers engaged in interstate business appear among the 1,386 transportation and storage utilities regulated by the commission. A large portion of the savings to the citizens through action by the commission is in lowered tariffs on farm products.

The steady growth of normal western travel to California was indicated in a statement issued last week by F. S. McGinnis, passenger traffic manager of the Southern Pacific. The figures were based upon the number of validations of tickets of Pacific Coast travelers from the East. These show an increase since May 15 of 10.54 per cent as compared with the corresponding period of last year. "The increase," said McGinnis, "is more impressive when it is recalled that this year there have been no important national conventions in California."

California is like a merchant with a wealth of merchandise on his shelves and not enough customers, State Real Estate Commissioner Stephen Barnson told local realtors at the monthly luncheon meeting of the San Francisco Real Estate Board, last week. "There is one thing that will bring these customers to our door and that is advertising," said Barnson. "I am going to advocate the spending of all surplus funds in my department to this end. California should have a well organized advertising and publicity program functioning throughout the year that would bring the new settlers and the new industries that this state can accommodate."

Declaring that thousands of California motorists are using illegal auto lights without knowing it, Frank G. Snook, chief of the Division of Motor Vehicles, announced plans for a statewide poster campaign in an effort to educate the public to the need for adjusting glaring or otherwise defective headlights. It is proposed to display the headlight posters permanently in filling stations through arrangements with the large gasoline distributing agencies.

Gross earnings of California prisoners have totaled $1,074,788 in the four years of State prison highway camp operations just completed, according to figures made public by the department of public works. After deduction of camp operation expenses, the convicts made net earnings of $144,782, which were either alloted to their dependents or credited to them against the time of their release. The allotments were announced as $33,395. The road camps were established under 1915 legislation but the wage system for convict workers was not inaugurated until 1923.

An apportionment of State money to the public schools of California for the first half of the year, totaling $15,902,110 officially was announced last week by State Superintendent of Public Instruction Cooper. Of the total $14,514,500 goes to the elementary schools, $1,078,810 to the high schools and $308,800 to the junior colleges.

That an immediate survey of State highway bridges in California is to be made in order to work out a plan for widening them and to determine what ones shall be handled first, is the announcement made at Sacramento by B. B. Meek, State director of public works.

The possibility that the California State Fair next year may continue for more than eight days, as has been the custom in the past, was seen last week when the directors set Saturday, September 1st, as the opening date for the 1928 exhibition, but postponed until a later date the setting of the closing day of the fair. The suggestion has come to the state agricultural society from various sources that the state fair should be extended to ten days, two weeks or even a month.

Plans for immediate construction of permanent encampment quarters for the California National Guard on the new camp site near San Luis Obispo were announced last week at Sacramento by R. E. Mittelstaedt.

Snow fell on the mountains at and near the Summit of the Sierra Nevada range last week, according to reports brought to Auburn, Placer County by motorists on their return home. The snow fell in flurries and there was no sustained storm.

With six weeks of the 1927 fire season remaining State Forester M. B. Pratt announced that damage on State protected lands has totaled only $438,415 thus far and predicted that California may achieve a new low record in losses this year. A comparatively small loss in the timber districts was stressed in Pratt's report to Fred G. Stevenot, State director of natural resources. Losses to date were classified as follows: Range fires $212,669; grain fires, $51,685; timber fires, $15,568; loss of improvements, $158,493. The burned areas include 2,863 acres of grain, 283,783 acres of grass, 109,653 acres of brush and 16,276 acres of timber.

Bacchus will smile on a bountiful harvest of the vineyards of Marin county on October 1, when the annual Grape Festival is held under the auspices of prominent society folk of the bay region. The celebration will be held, as usual, on the beautiful grounds of Congressman and Mrs. William Kent at Kentfield, who each year throw open their wooded acres on this occasion to the public. The proceeds will be devoted to the San Francisco Orphanage and Farm at San Anselmo.

Giving $330,000 to the San Francisco Bay Shore highway, the State Department of Public Works last week announced definite apportionment of $1,039,000 out of the $2,225,000 expected December 1 as the first money available under the Breed 1-cent gasoline tax increase law for new highway construction. This is the first announcement of highway budgeting under the new statute, which is calculated to provide $120,000,000 for new road building in California during the next decade.

A state-wide census of all California minors under the age of 18 years will be undertaken during the first week in October in accordance with a statute passed by the last legislature, it was announced last week by William John Cooper, state superintendent of public instruction. The survey is intended to provide information which will make for better administration of the state compulsory and part time education laws.

Camp Kearny, where 80,000 doughboys from Pacific coast States were trained in modern warfare in 1918 has passed from governmental control back to the original owner of the site, according to announcement made at San Diego last week by the Mack Copper Company. The federal court of claims at Washington has rendered a judgment in favor of the Mack Copper Company for $280,000 and returned the property to them.

There are now 432 water utilities operating in the state of California under the jurisdiction of the Railroad Commission, according to the annual report of the Hydraulic Division of the Engineering Department of the commission just compiled. These water utilities vary in size from small plants serving not more than two dozen consumers to the largest, which serves more than 120,000 consumers. The individual investment in the physical properties of these utilities varies from a few thousand dollars for the small plant to approximately $70,000,000 for the largest water utility. The total investment in public utility water works in California today is estimated by the Hydraulic Division to be approximately $200,000,000.

A gain of more than 8,000 members, with a total membership of more than 130,000, will be reported to the California Grand Lodge Free and Accepted Masons, when its seventy-eighth annual convention convenes in San Francisco, Tuesday, October 11, for a five-day gathering. Grand Secretary John Whicher, will also report an increase of twelve new lodges during the year. There will be more than 1,500 delegates in attendance, representing 563 subordinate lodges and a total membership of 130,000, representing the largest fraternal organization in California

INSURE LONGER LIFE FOR AUTO

Give Car Systematic Lubrication and Keep in First-Class Condition.

"Every car that comes from an automobile factory is built to deliver certain mileage to its owner, and it is up to the owner to get this mileage through proper service and upkeep," says a bulletin issued by the mechanical first-aid department of the Chicago Motor club. "Give the car systematic lubrication, periodic inspections and overhaulings, at which time worn parts can be economically replaced to insure longer life and service. Only in this way can you get from your car the mileage it was built to deliver.

Keeping in Condition.

"How long would we live if we didn't give ourselves a certain amount of exercise—if we didn't eat the things that give proper nutrition—if we didn't occasionally counsel with the doctor and the dentist? And just as we insure longer life for ourselves by doing these things, so do we insure longer life and service for our car by keeping it in first-class condition. There is probably no other fine piece of mechanism which has so little attention and care paid to it as the average man gives to his automobile. Take any of our fast through trains, for instance. They run on smooth rails, with a crew trained to give them proper care, and yet many times along the route the engine is taken off and run into the roundhouse for a thorough going over and a fresh engine, just overhauled, replaces it. How many motor car drivers have the forethought to even occasionally drive their automobiles to a garage and have it checked? Timely attention given to minor defects would add years to the life of the car.

Where Fault Lies.

"The fault," continues the bulletin, "lies in the American system of living—the hurry and bustle. We have no leisure for anything—we run our cars until they break down instead of giving them proper care. A car that is given care and attention, and kept in good running order, will deliver the mileage and give the service for which the manufacturer intended it."

Car Makers Are Turning Out Better Mechanics

Many of the motor car makers who are turning out better automobiles than ever before have undertaken to produce better mechanics to service their products. The trend is one that really means much to the motorist.

When an owner puts his car into the shop for service, labor always is one of the large items in the expense. The mechanic who is a specialist on any given car-care feature will turn out not only a better job, but a much quicker one, and the time item in the bill thus will be less costly.

The service schools being conducted quite generally among the leaders of the industry are the fruition of a program that has been followed somewhat lackadaisically for years. Competition has taken it out of the experimental stage.

First Aid Planned for Paris-Deauville Highway

The Paris-Deauville road, well marked with automobile wrecks every summer, is to have regular hospital service.

First aid stations are to be established along the 140 miles of the speedway to the seashore by the touring club of France.

At each 100 points, or every mile and a half, there will be equipment for emergency medical attention. At certain points there will be provision for summoning doctors and ambulances.

The road is the most popular out of Paris, and as it leads to the country's most fashionable and most expensive resort, there always are many fast cars.

Answer These

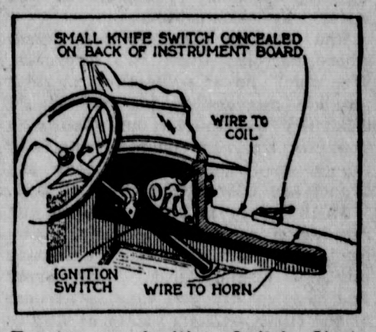
Can you answer these questions?

How fast may I drive? When may I pass a standing street car? How may I turn to the left on an intersecting street? When have I the right of way?

If you cannot answer these questions as fast as you can think and are ignorant of the correct replies, go to the nearest police station and secure a copy of the traffic regulations.

Device Gives Protection Against Auto Thieves

Nothing is more disconcerting to an auto thief than a noise which will call attention to his activities, and so the simple wiring scheme shown in the illustration should prove quite effective while the car is left in a well-populated district. All you need is a single pole, single throw knife switch and a few feet of wire. The knife switch should be concealed at any convenient point behind the instrument board. Connect one terminal of the switch to the binding post on the ignition switch, or to the wire that runs from the ignition switch to the spark coil, at any convenient point. Connect the remaining terminal of the switch to the binding post on the horn that is wired to the horn button, or to the wire itself if that is easier. When the switch is closed, turning on the ignition will cause the horn to sound. — Popular Science Monthly.



Turning on Ignition Switch Starts the Horn Sounding Continuously, Foiling the Automobile Thief.

Speedometer Very Poor Gas Mileage Indicator

The speedometer is a very valuable piece of equipment, but never depend upon its reading to tell when the gasoline supply needs replenishing. Mileage is not the only indication of gas consumption. All the "miles" the engine idles are never recorded, nor the leaks in the carburetor or gas line. Also there is evaporation to be considered. Do not trust even the gas tank gauge when it is necessary to find out about the gas supply. See that it is working properly into the tank through the filler pipe when possible.

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM

There exists in this country today two widely differing classes of publicists, who speak and write of war and peace. Fortunately, both classes agree that war is a bad thing and peace a good thing, but their views as to how peace may be best preserved are far apart.

One class urges preparedness in the form of surpassing armaments as the only safeguard, while the other advocates refusal to engage in war under any circumstances.

The common sense view is somewhere between these two extremes. We must have protection against possible aggression, yet we should diligently impress on our statesmen the fact that our people, especially the common people who bear the brunt, are thoroughly tired of war.

Much injury is being done to our reputation as a peace-loving nation by undue agitation for extensive military preparedness. Our army and navy experts are keeping abreast of the times in their technical studies and experiments, as they should do, but the country is in no mood to stand for excessive expenditures for armaments which may be obsolete in a few years. There is nothing to get excited about just now.

SUCCESS STANDARDS

Everyone leaves behind some impression on the world, whether for good or evil. Often what the world calls success during a person's lifetime turns to dross in the final accounting. Mere accumulation of wealth is a poor standard by which to judge the usefulness of one's life.

When the late Franklin D. Lane, former Secretary of the Interior, died in 1921, it was said that he left no estate whatever. Yet he was one of the finest public servants who ever graced a President's cabinet.

The estate of the late Samuel Gompers amounted to only about $30,000, an insignificant sum in this age of multi-millionires, but the influence of his work will be felt for generations yet to come.

Hundreds of instances may be recalled in which men who have made a powerful impression on the world have died comparatively poor in material possessions.

After all, the most priceless legacy one may leave to his family and to his country is a record of duty well performed. While material success is not to be despised, it should never be sought through the sacrifice of ideals.

Service to humanity is of more consequence than the accumulation of wealth, and true success depends upon what we contribute to the betterment of our fellow men.

VICTIMS OF DELUSION

From India comes news of further human life sacrificed to superstition. The young son of a native official fell sick and was thought to be possessed of the devil, whereupon it was sought to appease a local goddess and exercise the devil by offering up the lad's sister as a sacrifice, which was done.

The boy failed to respond to this vicarious treatment, so he was bound naked near a holy place and allowed to die of starvation and exposure.

The boy's father and two brothers were sentenced to death for the crime and his sister-in-law was given life imprisonment

While such proceedings appear heathenish to us today, and they certainly are heathenish, we may reflect that equally atrocious crimes were committed at Salem, Massachusetts, at the instigation of a president of Harvard University, and his son, in 1692.

With the horrible Salem witchcraft delusion in mind we should not condem the benighted natives of India too severely.

Ambitious inventors might try devising an automatic combination contraption for moving lawns in summer and shoveling snow in winter.

A PATRIOTIC CREED

"The American's Creed," adopted by Congress in 1919, is not as well known to the citizens of the country as it should be.

This creed was selected through a contest, open to all Americans, for the purpose of securing "the best summary of the political faith of America." The author of the successful manuscript was William Tyler Page, a descendant of President Tyler.

The phrases composing it are taken from the Preamble and Constitution of the United States, the Declaration of Independence, the Oath of Allegianace and from utterances of distinguished patriots, all woven together into a complete and lofty sentiment, as follows:

"I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people; whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a democracy in a republic; a sovereign Nation of many sovereign States; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of freedom, equality, justice and humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes.

"I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it; to support its Constitution; to obey its laws; to respect its flag, and defend it against all enemies."

CALAMITY CRY IS OLD

In a recent sermon, a New Jersey pastor made a statement that sounds quite familiar, as follows:

"There is lawlessness everywhere. Children no longer obey their parents. It is evident that the end of the age is at hand."

Then the pastor told his congregation that the words were not original with him, not even the utterance of the present day. They were translated from an inscription on a brick found in the ruins of ancient Assyria, dating centuries before the time of the patriarch Abraham.

Records which have been preserved during all periods of recorded history give evidence of similar conditions existing in the world. Sometimes an improvement is noted; again lawlessness and violence become more prevalent than ever.

While present-day conditions are bad enough, it seems that on the whole they are better than in the past. There is more thought given to the relief of suffering, to the betterment of industrial conditions, to mutual helpfulness and like matters of benefit to humanity than in former times.

Although the World war gave civilization a severe set-back in some respects, we must remember that war has marked the history of every generation of mankind. The same is true of lawlessness, oppression and every other manifestation of immorality.

These will always exist in greater or less degree, so long as good and evil struggle for mastery in the hearts and minds of men.

KNOW YOUR RABBITS

In life the rabbit is looked upon as a most ordinary species of the animal kingdom, but after death he may rise to a high dignity, according to the government biological survey, which has issued a warning to purchasers of fur garments with fancy names.

The poor little cotton-tail is the source of many wonderful furs, according to the survey's report, and his modest covering is now sold under the following names: Arctic seal, cape seal, clipped seal, ermine fox, French seal, Northern seal, meuse seal, new seal, and a few others.

Purchasers of furs are urged to become acquainted with the texture and other characteristics of the rabbit's pelt, so that they may not be fooled by the high-sounding names under which it is now sold to the unsuspecting public.

To avoid deception, you must not only "know your onions," but must also know your rabbits.

TEN HEALTH RULES

While not particularly original, the ten commandments of health suggested by Miss Maria Leonard, dean of women at the University of Illinois, are worthy of consideration. She says:

"Eat less; chew more. Ride less; walk more. Clothe less; bathe more. Worry less; work more. Idle less, play more. Talk less, think more. Go less; sleep more. Waste less; give more. Scold less; laugh more. Preach less; practice more."

There is a pretty good lot of advice in the above forty words, which are worth going over several times, giving thought to each suggestion. Better observance of these rules would tend to promote health and consequently a longer and more useful life.

Twenty-five per-cent of women in the United States are paid workers. The other 75 per cent includes the housewives.

With the modern rapid-fire divorce courts in action there is less leisure for repenting after the marriage in haste.

Why is it that just when everybody in the gathering is enjoying the occasion someone has to make a speech?

A blow on a shark's dorsal fin will put it to flight, says an expert diver and we are going to take his word for it.

DRIVE OUT THE ARSONIST

It is not possible to paint too blackly the crime of arson. In the English language, ample though it is, there are no adjectives vile enough to characterize as he deserves the willful and malicious burner.

Nothing gives him pause. The man who stoops to the torch would stoop without hesitation, to murder of the foulest kind. Nero, who fired Rome, also assassinated his own mother—and so, indeed, would the arsonist of today, if such an unspeakable deed would further his dark ends.

And he is as cowardly, as craven, as his deed is foul. Desperadoes there were, in the vanished days of the West, who robbed and plundered and killed—the James boys, for instance, and Tracy of Oregon. They stopped at nothing else, but they stopped at arson. There they drew the line. They did not shoot women and children, and they did not burn.

The incendiary, slinking, cat-eyed, shunning daylight and operating only in the dead of night, is a creature such as even the "bad men" of yesterday would have recoiled from, deeming him unfit for their society. How much more, then, should he be condemned by every decent, right-thinking, law-abiding, American!

For the arsonist is crafty without being clever, cruel without being courageous, evil without possessing a single redeeming quality to plead for him at the bar of public opinion. Since pity, or any of the finer human attributes, is foreign to his nature, so—always within due process of law—must pity be absent from his treatment when he is caught and brought to justice. He must be scotched like the snake he emulates.

America will never be an entirely healthful country for honest, God-fearing people to inhabit until it is made too hot for these employers of fire.—Safeguarding America Against Fire.

A press dispatch tells of a poor fellow who "died without the aid of a doctor," but, unfortunately, few have to shuffle off without such assistance.

This should give all an opportunity to see this splendid picture.

GIVES CREDIT WHERE DUE

The recent conferring of degrees by a Middle Western university upon a number of farmers whose work had been of aid in the progress of agriculture, is a salient example of American democracy. It but shows again that this is the one great country in the world where a man is rewarded and judged entirely upon his work, and not by social and economic standards beyond his control. These men being given this honor was but little commented upon for the reason that it is nothing unusual. The people realize it is natural that anyone who distinguishes himself in any way will get credit for it. In Europe, on the contrary, should any thing like this happen, it would be so unprecedented as to be a sensation. This is one of the reasons for the immense difference in progressiveness between the two continents.

There can be no danger of radicalism, or any other "ism," where democracy prevails. It is impossible to make a malcontent of a person who knows there is nothing that will oppose him should he have sufficient ability to become a great business man, statesman or anything else. Perfectly contented people won't trouble themselves to follow highly dubious theories of "what might be done."

BURLINGAME MAY CHANGE FORM OF CITY GOVERNMENT

The path was cleared for a change in goverment in Burlingame last Monday night when the city council voted to hold a freeholders election in conjunction with the general municipal election on Monday, April 9, 1928. The fifteen freeholders to be elected at that time will draft a new charter, which will in turn be presented to the voters for approval or rejection.

The action conforms to the policy of Mayor H. Totten, who, when taking the oath of office last May, declared that Burlingame had outgrown its present form of goverment and that he favored some change.

Mayor Totten appointed a committee of 15 representative citizens who for several months made a study of charter forms of goverment and finally on August 2 recommended that a change be made and that the city council take the first steps as soon as possible.

Beloit, Wisconsin, has as many telephones as the whole country of Greece, although Greece has 250 times as many people as the city of Beloit.

OLDEST MASONS ARE TENDERED BANQUET

P. P. Chamberlain, who recently retired as county treasurer after 40 years of service to the people of San Mateo county, and Fernand Levy, of San Mateo, were honored by Peninsula Masons last night at a united meeting in Redwood City. Chamberlain and Levy are two of the oldest Masons in California, each having belonged to the order more than half a century. Lodge members of Redwood City, San Mateo, Palo Alto, Francis Drake, Burlingame, Menlo Park, Daly City, and other cities participated in the celebration in honor of these two venerable lodgemen.

Philander Peregreen Chamberlain joined Redwood City Masonic lodge on September 18, 1869, and since that time has been Secretary, Master, Senior Deacon, Senior Warden, Treasurer, Marshal and Chaplain, serving years in each capacity. He is now 86 years of age.

Fernand Levy has been a Mason for fifty-four years, having affiliated with Hayward lodge No. 226 at Half Moon Bay on April 11, 1873. This lodge afterward changed its name and meeting place to San Mateo, and he was installed as its treasurer on December 27, 1873, which office he has held continuously ever since, a period of nearly fifty-four years.

ITALIANS CELEBRATE INDEPENDENCE DAY

Fifty-seven years ago the city of Rome was restored as the Capital city of an independent and united Italy, under the leadership of King Victor Emmanuel II, after 1,500 years of foreign domination.

The Italians of San Francisco, last Sunday, commemorated this eventful fete with a banquet at 12 noon in the Apollo Cafe, attended by more than 80 persons, including 23 men and one lady, pioneer inmates of the S. F. Relief Home, as honor guests.

The banquet was presided by Mr. Giuseppe Peschiera, who presented Supervisor Warren Shannon, as the personal representative of Mayor James Rolph, Jr., and Supervisor A. Roncovieri. Both of them delivered beautiful addresses.

At 2:00 p. m. started the public celebration on Washington Square, where Mr. Fred A. Vaudagnotti, of Daly City, as the orator of the day delivered the official speech illustrating the wonderful meaning of that patriotic event. Mr. Luigi Sillitti, the Italian Consul-General, also delivered a beautiful speech.

About 6,000 persons participated at the feast, rendered more jubilant by the Municipal Band directed by Professor Sapiro, and at 6:00 P.M., the crowd disbanded amidst enthusiastic cheers, at the sound of our "Star Spangled Banner."

USE OF TELEPHONE RESULTS IN CAPTURE OF BURGLAR

That Police Judge W. E. Langdon of Marysville appreciates the value of the telephone in emergencies is proved by his recent exciting experience.

During the summer months Langdon sleeps in the yard back of his house, a fact unknown to burglars who innocently choose his property for their personal exploitation. While the Judge watched, one of the burglars hopped the fence and tried the windows and doors of the house while the other stood lookout. As the prowlers went around the house, Judge Langdon slipped inside by the back door and telephoned the police, who arrived in a few moments in an armored car. The men fled before the police reached the scene, but were captured in short order.

WALTHY FOLKS SUED FOR SCHOOL TUITION

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Ames of Hillsborough, well known in social circles of San Francisco and the Peninsula, were last Tuesday named defendants in a suit for $814,08 filed in the superior court at Redwood City by the Santa Barbara Girls' school. Ames is an official of the National Ice Cream Company of San Francisco.

The amount represents a balance due for "services rendered" during the past two years to Gloria Ames, minor daughter of the Hillsborough couple, it is alleged in the complaint, which says that numerous requests for collection of the sum have been unsuccessful.

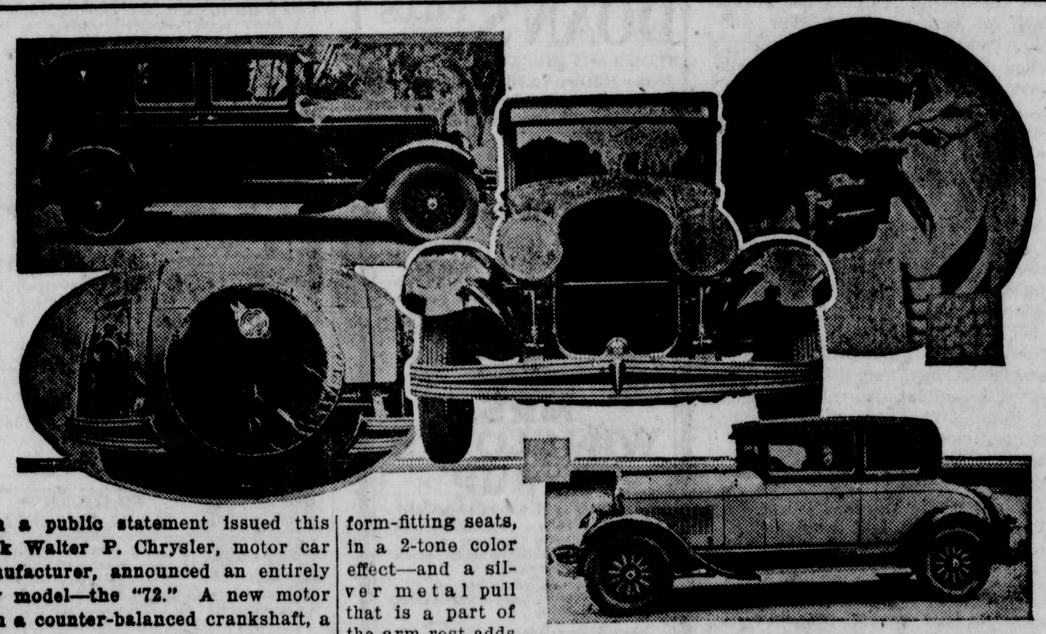
CHRYSLER "72" EMBODIES NEW FEATURES



In a public statement issued this week Walter P. Chrysler, motor car manufacturer, announced an entirely new model—the "72." A new motor with a counter-balanced crankshaft, a larger bore and stroke, which produces 75 horsepower and is capable of maintaining a speed of 72 miles or more per hour is the outstanding feature. Ten inches have been added to the frame, which gives the new car an appearance that was not found in the old models. Great care has been shown in the selection of interior decorations and fittings. Beautiful mohair covers the deeply upholstered form-fitting seats, in a 2-tone color effect—and a silver metal pull that is a part of the arm rest adds to the complete comfort found in the new cars. The picture in the upper left corner is that of the new Crown sedan—in the lower right corner is the new four-pasenger coupe, which is one of the most striking models of the "72" line. (Center) is a head-on view of the new Chrysler radiator and the new full drum headlights mounted on nickled posts. The picture in the upper right corner shows the housing which covers the blocks of live rubber in which all the spring shackles are set. This feature greatly improves the riding qualities of the car. The lower left corner shows a picture of the new factory-built bumper, which has been designed not only to protect the rear end of the car, but to improve its appearance by following the lines of the spare tire.

We are now displaying in our show rooms the new "52," "62," "72" and "82" Chrysler. You are invited to come in and look them over. You'll be most welcome.
—We also have a few excellent buys in high-grade 1927 second-hand Chryslers.

We both spoke at once at that, disclaiming any offense, and the doctor, after a glance at his watch, concluded by asking him to sit down, and offering him a cigar. I very much hoped that both these invitations would be declined, for with that girl in the next room and Wilkins' knock momentarily expected at the door, it was rather too close quarters to be comfortable. But my chief seemed to be perfectly at ease.

"I'll confess," he began, lighting a cigar of his own, "that I'm a little curious to know what caused your change of heart; what it was that convinced you that Phelps and I aren't engaged in a conspiracy to thwart justice."

"I am afraid I am a self-convicted egoist," said Ashton. "It took an hour or more for the thought to occur to me that there are other people, besides myself, living in The Meredith, and that Jane Perkins might have given that place as her address, without any reference to me whatever, might have given it in perfectly good faith. So when I came home to dinner I made some inquiries, and was cool enough by that time not to be overwhelmed with surprise to find that the address was apparently given in good faith. At any rate, there is a housemaid named Jane Perkins living in this hotel."

The doctor simulated no surprise over this announcement. He merely nodded calmly, and said:

"You will not have seen her yet, I suppose."

"So you know about her, too!" exclaimed Ashton. "And you were ahead of me again. Well, that's not remarkable; you kept your temper and I didn't. But though I haven't seen her yet, I don't believe you have, either, because I have been given to understand that it's her evening out."

"I suppose," said the doctor, "that you have taken precautions for apprehending her when she comes back?"

"Yes," said Ashton; "there's a man on watch in her room now. She won't go far. I understand she's been ill the greater part of the week."

The doctor smiled and waved his hand toward the telephone. "You may as well tell your man to go home," he said; "the girl's here."

Ashton sprang right out of his chair. "What's that!" he demanded. "You've got here here; hiding her from me?"

"If I were hiding her from you, I shouldn't have told you. No, she's not in hiding at all. She's doing up the bedrooms in this apartment. She'll come when I call her, which I mean to do in a very few minutes. When she comes, I mean to make a little examination of her mind to determine her actual connection with the crime."

"I suppose," said Ashton rather sarcastically, "that you won't mind my asking permission to contribute a few questions of my own to that examination."

"Not at all," said the doctor quite simply. "You may ask her anything you like."

There was a little silence. Then Ashton said impatiently.

"Well, what are you waiting for?"

"I'm expecting another visitor. When I heard your knock, I thought that you were he. It's none other than our friend Wilkins."

Ashton laughed. "Wilkins!" he repeated. "What do you want of him?"

The doctor glanced at his watch.

"I fancy that he's coming now. Why, Wilkins knows this girl, who is a stupid creature and rather easily alarmed. She'd be almost sure to be panic-stricken at the sight of these instruments. All ignorant persons are the same way." He paused and shot a derisive smile at Ashton. "They put them in the category of black-art and hocus-pocus, and regard them with a mixture of contempt and terror. But she has confidence in Wilkins, and by his submitting to be harnessed in the same way we propose to harness her, which he has agreed to do, it will quiet whatever fears she may have."

Ashton looked dubious. Already Wilkins had tapped on the door.

"Stop a bit, Phelps," said my chief as I started toward the door. "Look here, Ashton! Use a little plain common sense for a minute. You don't half believe yourself that this girl has any guilty connection with the crime. Which way will you find out the most? By making this girl feel that there's nothing to be afraid of; that we're simply investigating, and not accusing her at all? Or by putting her through an old-fashioned 'third degree'?"

"All right," said Ashton; "have it your own way, only I'll have my way tomorrow."

"There won't be any need of that," said my chief. "The Oak Ridge mystery is going to be solved tonight, and in this room; solved down to the last detail. Open the door, Phelps."

I imagine that Ashton himself was not more surprised by the doctor's prophecy than I was. To be sure I had penetrated further into the mystery than Ashton had. I had shared with my chief the knowledge of Jane Perkins' strange other self. I knew that the mysterious, savage creature in fulfilling an oath, which to her must have possessed a religious sanctity, had committed what our more civilized society called a crime. And yet I felt sure that Doctor McAlister meant more than that when he had promised Ashton the whole solution of the mystery. The heart, the essence of the mystery was still unsealed. By some process of reasoning, or intuition, which I had not followed, my chief held that secret, still unsolved, in the hollow of his hand, and he meant to reveal it to us before the night was out.

I opened the door and told Wilkins to come in. I had an impression that he started a little at the sight of Ashton; and I didn't at all wonder, since I remembered the tacit understanding between ourselves and him, that this examination of the girl was to be for the purpose of shielding her against the district atorney, rather than of betraying her to him.

"I Suppose," Said the Doctor, "That You Have Taken Precautions for Apprehending Her When She Comes Back?"

But I had very little leisure for reflecting on Wilkins' fears or misgivings, because, almost before I had closed the door behind him, I heard the doctor call out, "Perkins."

Well as I understood his experiments, and confident as I was in the success of them, I found it hard to go on breathing steadily while I waited for the response to the call that was to come from the inner room. Would it be Jane Perkins in her own proper person who would appear in the doorway in answer to the call, or would the occupant of her body prove to be that other, wilder soul?

When she answered, "Coming, sir," I drew in a deep breath of relief, for it was the voice of the girl who used and abused English as her mother-tongue. The next moment she was in the doorway. She was not Fanenna, not the girl who, with green, blazing eyes, had flung that defiant challenge back at the doctor only a few minutes before. And yet, she was not precisely Jane Perkins either, not the stodgy, thick-witted housemaid who had giggled with such unalloyed delight as she fished for the doctor's knife in the vase of water. The girl who stood there now looking at us had thoughtful, troubled eyes. Something—an elusive memory, a nameless emotion, a vague, fluid thing that would not crystallize was perplexing her. She was trying to think, which is something I am willing to wager that Jane Perkins had never done in her life.

Naturally, the first person I looked at when I withdrew my eyes from her was Ashton. He was looking straight into her face, and it was the same face, in a purely physical way, that he had seen the night he went to the hospital with us. It was not until I saw the look of blank indifference depicted upon his own that the realization was forced upon me that he would not recognize her any better than I had done. From him my gaze flashed round to the doctor, and on the way it took in Wilkins. Both of them were watching her, both, I guessed from their faces, had noted the same indefinable difference that had struck me. It was the doctor who spoke.

"Perkins," he said, "here is Mr. Ashton. He is one of the assistants to the district attorney, and he and I and Mr. Phelps here are interested in trying to find out something about the murder which took place at Oak Ridge a few nights ago."

"Murder!" she cried with a gasp. "I don't know nothin' about any murder, sir."

"No," said the doctor, "I'm quite sure you don't. But we think it possible that you know some things which will help us to find out who the murderer is. Are you willing to help us?"

She hesitated a moment, then turned quite frankly to Wilkins.

"Is it all right, Mr. Wilkins?" she asked. Then quickly turned back to the doctor. "I beg your pawdon, sir, for askin' such a question, but I know Mr. Wilkins, and if he says it's all right—"

"It's all right, Jane," he assured her. "I came up here a purpose so that there'd be nothing for you to worry about."

"All right, sir," she said, turning once more to Doctor McAlister. "I'll be glad to tell you anything I know, I'm sure, though I don't see how what I know can help much, unless—" She frowned and rubbed the back of one hand across her forehead.

"Unless what?"

"Nothin', sir. I seem to be thinkin' of all sorts of curious things, as if my mind was tryin' to wander like."

The doctor laughed. "We're all that way sometimes," he said. "Sit down in this big chair."

She obeyed a little reluctantly. Whether it was a half-memory of it that troubled her, or merely the instinctive hesitation of one of her class to make herself comfortable in our presence, I did not know.

The doctor busied himself with his instruments. The girl watched him rather nervously.

"I beg pawdon, sir," she said. "Are you goin' to do anything with those? I don't exactly like the looks of 'em, sir; all those queer lookin' machines. Is it anything like goin' to the dentist's?"

"Nothing in the world," laughed the doctor. "These machines don't hurt. Here, Wilkins, sit down in this chair beside her, and we'll harness you up, too."

He hung up before the girl one of the pair of little telephones that we had used in our association test on Harvey. Then he turned his attention to Wilkins, who had seated himself readily enough in the chair the doctor had designated.

"That's a very impressive looking machine, sir," the man commented. "May I ask what name it's called by?"

"Its name is just as impressive as it is," replied the doctor. "It is called a recording phonopneumosphygmograph."

Up to that moment Ashton had kept perfectly quiet, but at the sound of that portentous word he burst into a roar of laughter, which Wilkins decorously and respectfully echoed. I laughed frankly myself. What the purpose of the instrument might be, I had no idea, but the prodigious name which the doctor assigned to it struck me as nothing more than a flight of his rather grotesque fancy.

"Well, sir," said Wilkins, "it will have to accomplish a good deal to live up to that name."

That my chief had, by no means, exhausted his store of surprises, became evident when he began his examination of the girl. There was nothing psychological about it. He questioned her very much as Ashton would have done.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

African Prickly Pear Has Its Good Points

The prickly pear is said to be so tenacious of life that a leaf or even a small portion of a leaf, if thrown on the ground, strikes out roots within a short time and becomes the parent of a fast-growing plant.

Mischievous though the African prickly pear may be, it is not without its good qualities. Its juicy fruit, though rather deficient in flavor, is delightfully cool and refreshing in the dry heat of summer, and a kind of treacle is made from it.

Great caution is necessary in peeling this curious fruit, the proper way being to impale the fruit on a fork or stick while one cuts it open and removes the skin. The person who undertakes to pluck this treacherous fruit with unguarded fingers meets with an experience he does not soon forget. Concentrated essence of stinging nettle seems all at once to assail hands, lips and tongue, and the skin wherever it comes in contact with the ill-natured fruit, is covered with a group of minute bristly hairs, apparently growing from it, and venomous and irritating to the last degree.

In dry weather these spiteful little stings do not even wait for the newly arrived victim, but fly about, light as thistle-down, ready to settle on anyone who has not learned by experience to give the prickly-pear a wide berth.

Ingredients for Jelly

Scientific study of the principles of jelly making has shown that three ingredients are required for the formation of a jelly, namely, sugar, acid and pectin; and these must be present in fairly definite proportions. Tart apples, cranberries, red currants and grapes, when collected at the proper stage of ripeness, contain pectin and acid in sufficient quantity to form a good jelly when cooked for a short time with the proper amount of sugar.

SALAMANDERS

The salamanders are little creatures very much like lizards in looks, except their skin is not scaly as a lizard's.

They have four legs and a tail, and are very nice, kind and gentle.

Well, these salamanders agreed that they would have a fire department, and the next thing was to arrange for the hook and ladder.

Finally it was decided that their salamander cousins should be chosen to run the hook and ladder.

"We shall call ourselves the fire and water fire department," said one of the fire salamanders.

"It will be our business to rush in and rescue the animals who are in danger of being burned to death, and it will be your business to help them down to the brook, where we'll have our hose ready to sprinkle them with good, cool water."

But days and days went by, and still no fire broke out.

"I know what's the trouble," said another one of the fire salamanders. "We have no fire bell; there may have been fires that we knew nothing about—you never can tell."

"Don't be gloomy," said still another fire salamander.

"We'll have a fire bell. I know where a kind old cow left her bell from last year.

"We'll put it by the stump just at the edge of the brook and all the animals can be told to move it when there is a fire.

"Over There," Said Grandfather Frog.

"Then we will all come out and stop the fire."

And soon notices were put up all over the woods and around the brook which read:

"To the Animals: Attention! In case of fire, ring the cow bell by the brook. The Fire and Water Department of the Salamanders will PUT IT OUT."

These notices were read by all the animals, and the very next day the salamanders heard the cow bell.

"Where's the fire?" they all shouted.

"Over there," said Grandfather Frog, who was watching the fire department start off.

They wiggled and crawled as quickly as they could to the spot where the fire was. It was the vireo family's nest.

You know the vireos are those beautiful shy birds that live in the woods and have such lovely voices.

The fire salamanders rushed right into the fire and pulled out of the nest the vireo children just in time before their little feathers got burnt.

And, of course, the mother and daddy vireo were able to fly out.

When they all reached the brook at last the mother and daddy vireo sang the most wonderful song as a reward to the brave salamander fire department.

Exposed

The teacher of the open-air class was doing her best to instill the rudiments of natural history into her young charges. She held before them the picture of a deer, but no one could tell her what it was.

"Now, Tommy," she said, pointing to one small boy, "surely you know what this animal is called. Come now, think. What does your mother sometimes call your father?"

The child's eyes beamed with intelligence.

"Well, teacher," he said, haltingly, "it don't look much like a pig to me."

A Wise Youth

A small boy had just been vaccinated, and the doctor prepared to bandage the sore arm when the youngster said: "Put it on the other arm, doctor."

"Why, no," said the physician. "I want to put the bandage on your sore arm so the boys at school won't hit you on it."

"Then you put it on the other arm, please. You don't know the fellows at our school."

Poison Room Located in Heart of London

The "poison room" lies a few yards from a roaring stream of tram cars and omnibuses and lorries, and within a stone's throw almost of Westminster bridge, London, a room, perhape six feet by four, its walls almost entirely made of glass, and provided with a double door so that none of the deadly gas with which it is often filled shall leak into the outer air.

This poison room in S. E. 1 is not the lethal chamber of a Lambeth "supercrook," but is used to test the efficiency of gas masks and other life-saving apparatus by a firm which makes such things.

In most cases the poison fumes from inside the room are "fed" to the experimenters outside through a tube, but they can go in if they like.—From the Continental Edition of the Daily Mail.

Ape Earns Living

G. P. Drinkel, a rubber planter in Sumatra, reports that he has an ape that earns his living. The pet can do all the work in the preparation of rubber, and Drinkel says that the climber is an energetic workman on the plantation every week day. His name is Sultan I. He is particularly efficient in washing an automobile, and serves dishes from the kitchen to the dining room. Sultan I is also a jockey and an accomplished musician, being able to take part in the local Javanese orchestra. For recreation he enjoys cycling and card playing. Drinkel has made a hobby of training orang-outangs, and he says that in the anthropoid family of the ape, the gorilla is the only one which refuses to be tamed.

Airedale Guards Chickens

Rags, an airedale, appointed himself a guardian of 150 small chickens running about the Powers farm on the Bath-Brunswick (Maine) road. The airedale keeps the chickens out of the garden and away from cars that drive up to the filling station owned by his master. Whenever a wayward chick goes where he should not, Rags noses him back toward the chicken houses. The dog picked up the idea of guardianship all by himself.

Feel Stiff and Achy?

TO feel constantly lame and achy is too often a sign of sluggish kidneys.

Sluggish action permits waste poisons to remain in the blood and is apt to make one languid, tired and achy, with dull headaches, dizziness and often a nagging backache. A common warning that the kidneys are not acting right is scanty or burning secretions.

OCEAN CURRENTS HELD UP INVASION OF WESTERN COAST

The wide, wind-swept drifts and currents of the Pacific, which may have drawn seven intrepid aviators to death within the past few weeks, have many freakish and tragic feats to mark their known history, it is revealed by the archives in the Russian department of the Bank of Italy. It is not unlikely that these currents, their parallel winds and their affinities of storm and fog may have held up the invasion and the exploration of the west coast of America for centuries.

The records, culled from the library of the Imperial Russian consulate in San Francisco, and many other sources, show that from the time the first Russian exploration party visited Alaska in 1647 until the expedition of Captain Behring under the Russian flag in 1782, the crossing of the narraw straits separating Siberia from Alaska was an almost impossible task.

One Russian navigator, in a very striking log, told of having been caught in a drift off the Aleutians while attempting to make the journey of 100 miles or less to Okhotsk, Siberia. Despite a full spread of sail he was carried through the doldums and down to the equator, "where the water seemed to boil below us and the tar melted in the ship's cables."

"A mutiny threatened," the log continued. "We had but one barrel of water aboard." He was forced to sail 1,800 miles due north to complete his original course. A journey of some 3,600 miles down the drifts and the vagrant winds and all the way back again to span two destinations separated by a scant hundred miles!

Another navigator, attempting the same short course, drifted to New Zealand.

Many other such adventures are noted in these precious archives, showing how wind and wave worked against the settlement of the West coast, leaving the way open for the Exploradores from New Spain and the Argonauts from across the Great Divide.

The Russian department of the bank is also rotable in that it employes all of the members of the last Imperial consulate in San Francisco. A. Wywodzeff, the last man to represent Czar Nicholas as consul general in San Francisco, is a highly valued worker in the great institution. Cyprian Shanowsky, chancellor in the Imperial consulate under four consuls-general, a leader in Russian club life and a skilled musical director, is head of the department. One of the consuls under whom he served was named Rogestvensky, a brother of Admiral Rogestvensky who led the ill-fated Russian fleet in the battle of the Sea of Japan. This consul-general died on February 20, 1915, the day on which the Panama-Pacific International Exposition opened in San Francisco, and Shanowsky acted in his place for several months thereafter.

Arthur Landesen, who was once vice-consul in Kobe, Japan, and Peter Orloff, a representative of the former consulate in Chicago, are also members of the bank's staff.

SPECIAL HANDLING OF TRANSATLANTIC CALLS

The timing of trans-Atlantic calls originating in the United States is done in New York rather than in the town or city where the call originates.

The operating method for trans-Atlantic calls provides for an operator in New Yok and an operator in London, with communication with each other by means of the radio channel. These operators are called circuit operators, and it is their duty to pass and receive calls, reports and orders over the New York-London channel and to start conversation when both subscribers are ready.

In addition, however, there are the report operators, whose duty it is to record calls and deal with subscribers and other operators in giving and receiving reports and getting subscribers to the telephone at the proper time for the start of the conversation. When the trans-Atlantic connection is made, these operators in New York time it and then quote the charges to the operator at the office where the call originates.

The trans-Atlantic operators in the New York office have come in vocal contact with many famous people since the service was inaugurated. All kinds of people have been met vocally, at least, by these operators, including prices, prime ministers, lords, ladies, archbishops and barons, some with titles that date back to the days when long distance transmission of intelligence was by means of beacon fires.

Paris staged another centennial celebration recently, when some one remembered that the first giraffe ever seen in France arrived at the Paris Zoo in 1827. It is said that the populace of that day viewed the strange creature with incredulity almost equal to that related of the American farmer, who, upon seeing a giraffe for the first time, gravely shook his head and declared: "There ain't no such animal."

Wife, to her husband in the next room: "Dear, what are you using to open that can with?"

"Why," he said, "with a can opener. What did you think I was doing it with?"

"Well," replied his wife, "I thought from your remarks that you were opening it with a prayer."

Ex - Stenographer: "Does your husband give you an allowance, or do you use the touch system?"

It's fun to build a home. Your own home.

Clerk: "I'm not feeling well, sir."

Boss: "Why don't you get a bottle of ink to make you write?"

The wife of a naval man handed the pastor this note: "Peter Bowers having gone to sea, his wife desires the prayers of the congregation for his safety."

The minister hastily glanced over it and announced: "P. Bowers, having gone to see his wife, desires the prayers of the congregation for his safety."

When you think of building, think of H. H.

"Do you suppose her father really came over in the Mayflower?"

"I don't know, but I bet he still owes for the ride."

We could all profit by the saying on an old English sun dial: "Let others tell of rain and showers; I only record the sunny hours."

The sooner you start, the sooner you'll finish paying for that Home of your own.
